Going local

Get connected to support resources in your community

As an Aetna Medicare Advantage member or caregiver, you have access to special support services through our Resources For Living® program (RFL®). RFL is designed to help you find services in your area — from personal care, housekeeping and maintenance to caregiver support and more.

How we can help you

Just call us and tell us what you're looking for and what's important to you. Our consultants will conduct research on your behalf and give you information on your request. We'll give you the referrals, but it's up to you to decide if you want to use the services. There's no cost to call RFL, and we don't have financial relationships with the companies we refer you to. Our consultants are simply there to help connect you with resources you need.

We can help you find:

- Transportation to a doctor's appointment
- Connection to caregiver support groups or a certified peer support specialist
- Local referrals to help manage caregiving responsibilities
- Home-delivered meals
- Senior living options, short and long term
- Emergency response systems
- Adult day care programs
- Pet care services
- Financial consultation for debt consolidation or budgeting
- Legal services for help with preparation of a will or living will
- Online self-service options for emotional support to supplement a care plan
- Short-term counseling for stress and anxiety
- Respite care
- Support for common needs like time management, laundry and dry cleaning, or home contractors

If you choose services that have costs associated with them, you'll have to pay for those services yourself. But there's no cost to speak with Resources For Living.

For more information, visit us on the Aetna Medicare website at aetnamedicare.com. Or call us at 1-866-370-4842 (TTY: 711), Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. for all continental U.S. time zones.

Addressing cost

Finances may be a concern for you and your loved one. Here are a few quick tips:

- Check their Aetna Medicare Advantage plan to see exactly what is covered.
- Create a budget.
- Look into Social Security disability benefits or life insurance policies.
- See if they may be eligible for veteran's benefits.

Long-distance caregivers

If you live a long distance from a relative or friend who becomes ill, you may not be able to help out with day-to-day care and decisions. Long-distance caregiving is common, but it presents its own set of challenges, including:

- Expenses for travel to visit the loved one
- Time off work for visits and long-distance medical or estate planning
- Frustration due to not being able to see your loved one in person as often as you'd like
- Difficulty recognizing changes in your loved one's health, especially if there are no other close caregivers, which can make care decisions harder

What you can do to help

There are plenty of things you can do to make your role easier, even at a distance. Here are just a few suggestions:

- Create an informal care team nearby your loved one if you're the sole caregiver. This can include neighbors, family, friends, church and other community members.
- Ask your loved one to grant you access to their health information. You can talk directly with their doctor (and us at Aetna) to help coordinate their care.
- Have a formal team of paid help if your relative or friend needs more regular care. You may also consider a geriatric care manager who functions as a "surrogate you" to coordinate care and keep you informed of what's happening.
- Plan regular trips to see your loved one. Enjoy your time with them and use the visits to talk with doctors, lawyers and financial advisors.
- Plan family meetings if there are other caregivers involved. Try to divide up tasks and talk about any issues or tensions.

Remember: If you need any help with figuring out long-distance care, call Resources For Living at 1-866-370-4842 (TTY: 711) Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. for all continental U.S. time zones. Even if you're across the country, Resources For Living can help you find local care options for your loved one.

Start the conversation

Conversations about your loved one's care needs can be hard.

Here are some tips on how to start the conversation:

- Plan your discussion for a quiet, calm place.
- Avoid interruptions and distractions.
- Think about what you want to say ahead of time.
- Talk from the perspective of concern and care.
- Listen to their concerns and don't be critical or confrontational.
- Reassure your loved one you'll work together to solve their challenges.

Important questions to ask

- How are you feeling, really? How is your energy level and appetite?
Are you sleeping well?
- How are you managing around the house? Are you getting out as often as you would like?
- What are you most concerned about?
- How can I be sure that your safety and well-being are taken care of?
- Have you had a complete physical exam lately? Can I go with you to a doctor's appointment?
- Would you like to remain at home or move to a care facility down the road (if needed)?
- What medications are you taking, and what's the dosage?
- What conditions are you taking these drugs for? Where are your prescriptions filled?
- Are finances a concern? Would you like help paying bills or organizing a monthly budget?
- Who is your lawyer? Do you have a will, a health care power of attorney or a living will?

Home safety checklist

Everyone has unique safety needs as part of their personal health journey, but there are a few things to keep in mind as you help get everything ready at home.

Questions to ask your loved one

- Where do you spend the most time when you are at home?
- How do you usually move from room to room?
- Is there anything that you feel is unsafe in your home?
- Do you need anything to be updated or fixed?

Checklist

- Lighting
Make sure every area of the house is well lit. Don't forget areas like the garage, basement or front and backyard.
- Walkways and steps
Check the driveway for cracks and bumps, or anything that could cause someone to trip. Walk up and down the stairs to make sure nothing's loose or broken, and firmly test the handrails.
- Doors and entryways
Doors should be easy to open and free of any obstructions. Doormats should be secured in place without any upturned corners.
- Bathrooms
Confirm that toiletries, prescriptions and essential items are all within easy reach. Check that the shower/bathtub has a non-slip mat or strips and, if needed, a grab bar or seating options.
- Bedrooms
Ask yourself, "Can my loved one get in and out of bed safely and comfortably?" Remove any clutter or unnecessary hazards to clear the path to the bathroom or hallway.
- Trouble spots
Mark high-accident zones with bright tape. These could be the top or bottom of the stairs or areas where furniture sticks out.

Taking care of you

Practicing self-care is important, and connecting with others can be a great way to relieve tension and stress. Even a simple conversation with friend or family member can make all the difference. Here are some ideas to get you started:

- Research adult day care centers in your area. These could give you some time off to spend with friends, family or others. If you need help, a Resources For Living consultant can help you find centers close to you.
- Remember to recognize your accomplishments as a caregiver instead of dwelling on your challenges. A counselor or life coach can help you deal with difficult emotions and find new ways to tackle any troubles you face.
- Join a support group that's run by a qualified professional. These groups allow caregivers to talk about common feelings and challenges, and you might even make some new friends. Contact a Resources For Living representative to find out about local meetings in your area.

Remember: If you have any symptoms of depression — extreme sadness, trouble concentrating, apathy, hopelessness or thoughts about death — see a doctor right away.

Common community resources

As a caregiver, it's good to know about the support options available to you. We've put together a list of common services* and a brief description of each.

Your local Area Agency on Aging or Resources For Living can help you find the following services in your local community:

- Retirement communities or Section 8 housing: Apartments for those who can live independently with minimal support services.
- Assisted living: An apartment-like setting with some support services for personal care. It provides both independence and support if your loved one is in relatively good health.
- Skilled nursing facility: Provides 24-hour nursing care for a loved one with a serious condition who has been released from the hospital.
- Home health care: From personal care to skilled nursing services. It includes services like bathing, toileting, housekeeping and meal preparation, wound care, physical therapy and administering medications. It's for those who want to remain in the home but need extra care.
- Transportation services: Door-to-door transportation to medical appointments, shopping and local events.
- Senior centers: Places where your loved one can socialize, take part in activities or classes, and perhaps share a meal.
- Housekeeping or maintenance: Help with household tasks such as cleaning, laundry, cooking and shopping; or handyman services such as home repairs and yard work.
- Meal services: Home-delivered meals if your loved one can't cook or shop on their own. This is often called Meals on Wheels.
- Bill payment and tax assistance: Trained volunteers can help manage monthly finances and file tax returns.
- Social support: Community programs such as Friendly Visitors or phone calls to keep in contact with your loved one living at home.
- Emergency response system: A bracelet or necklace triggers a call to you as the emergency contact or to local emergency services.
- Adult day care: Transportation to a supervised care facility for activities during the day if your loved one needs constant monitoring. Many programs offer Alzheimer's care, for instance.
- Respite facility: Longer-term care for your loved one (up to a couple of weeks) to give you a longer break.
- Hospice care: End-of-life care for when your loved one has less than six months to live. The goal is to make them comfortable and ease their passing at home or at a residential facility.
- Area Agency on Aging (AAA): This national association's mission is to help older adults and people with disabilities live with dignity and find care choices in their homes and communities. You can find the national listing at n4a.org.
